Interviewed. The New York Herald this morning says: For twenty-four hours, or until yesterday afternoon, New York city held a prince of the house of Austria. He came and departed quietly-so quietly, in fact, that even the management of the Astor House was not aware he was other than the Count of Wurtemberg, whose name is scrawled in a bold hand on the hotel register. Later it was discovered that he was Prince George of Bavaria, grandson of the Emperor Franz Josef of Austria. He sailed yesterday afterbut confined to those who were partici-pants or aiders and abettors in the recent noon for Bremen on the Kaiser Wilhelm ed by his royal title. He started with surprise and then frowned with perplexity. Then he said he was Wurtemberg-the Count of Wurtemberg. When reminded that he bore a marked resemblance to Prince George of Bavaria he pondered before replying good-naturedly:

"In my travels since leaving Munich I have seen and come in contact with almost everything but the American newsgatherer.

what tremendous resources there are in this country. It is marvelous, especially the energy one sees everywhere. You call it strenuousness over here. "Yesterday afternoon I went down to Wall street and saw the new stock exchange. Wall street-one hears so much of it. Bavaria, I believe, supplies the United States with more musicians than commer-cial products, but we hope in time to remedy that.

"Fifth avenue is very well known to me by hearsay as the street on which so many American millionaires live. I, however, was we saw this morning. They, perhaps, are much more pleasing beyond the walls, but on the outside they appear so much alike. They give the impression of all having been built by the same architect.

"We also," laughed the prince, "had been warned against the charm of American wowarned against the charm of American wo-men."

Returning to the purpose of his travels, Prince George said he had gained much valuable information regarding the different industrial countries through which he had passed, particularly their industrial and ad-ministrative systems. This information he expects to impart to Prince Ludwig and the Payardan government with a view to ex-Bavarian government with a view to ex-tending the relations of Bavaria with for-

The New York Tribune prints the follow ing from New Orleans last night: "I see very little of Mr. Cleveland now," said Charles S. Fairchild today, when asked if he could discuss recent reports and denials that Mr. Cleveland would take an active part in the next national campaign. "I believe, however, that Mr. Cleveland will not take an active part in politics."

In answer to further questions Mr. Fairchild said: "I hear very little of politics in New York. The next presidential campaign does not attract much attention. So far as does not attract much attention. So far as I know, it is pretty generally believed that Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated by the republican party and elected. The country is prosperous. I do not hear much tariff discussion by business men. Sugar is a matter that vitally interests comparatively few, though directly and indirectly affecting a great many, and Mr. Roosevelt seems to be nonular on the whole.

seem to me to afford the campaign material for either side that was furnished in the last campaign, and, so far as I can person ally judge, either Mr. Roosevelt or the democratic party would have to do something in the nature of a resolution to afford the democrats a reasonably good chance of carrying enough eastern or western states to have a majority in the electoral college I believe that these views obtain rather generally in New York. I do not believe that there is the least doubt about Mr. Roosevelt's election."

The manner in which warfare is being carried on by the American troops in Mindanao is indicated by the orders issued by Gen. Jesse M. Lee for the suppression of the ladrones and insurrectos. March 23. a party of twenty or thirty ladrones and insurrectos, under Adriano Concepcion, an insurrecto who had escaped from prison, entered the town of Surgao, Mindanao, about noon, and, evidently as result of prearrangement, was joined by about 100 natives. The town was occupied by constabulary; the sentinel at headquarters was overpowered; the building looted, 100 rifles taken, including twenty-five Krags; 3,000 rounds of ammunition, 7,000 pesos (civil funds) and a number of constabulary uniforms. Inspector Clark of the constabulary was killed and several other Americans wounded and missing. A few provincial officers and teachers, with some side arms and very little ammunition, took refuge in the provincial building and kept the insurrectos at bay until 6:30 p. m., when they abandoned the town and retreated. Governor Taft, as a result of this, called upon the military for assistance and called upon the military for assistance, and Gen. Jesse M. Lee, with two companies of the 27th, arrived at Surigao on the 25th of March, and having assumed command of all troops and constabulary in the province, issued orders looking to the suppression of
